CONTRIBUTORS

Neil Baldwin is the Executive Director of the National Book Foundation, sponsor of the National Book Awards. His next book, Henry Ford and the Jews, will be published in 2001 by PublicAffairs, Inc.

Harold Billings is director of General Libraries, The University of Texas at Austin. The author or editor of works dealing with contemporary literature and bibliography, as well as numerous articles about library cooperation and the electronic information revolution. His professional responsibilities for, and his personal interest in special collections are approaching fifty years.

Brian Boyd is Professor of English at the University of Auckland. His books include Vladimir Nabokov: The Russian Years, Vladimir Nabokov: The American Years, and the recently published Nabokov’s Pale Fire: The Magic of Artistic Discovery. He is currently at work on a biography of the philosopher, Karl Popper, and a history of the narrative.

Christopher de Hamel is Director of Western Manuscripts at Sotheby’s London and Fellow Librarian Elect of the Library at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. He has published widely on early manuscripts, including his groundbreaking A History of Illuminated Manuscripts and Scribes and Illuminators.

Stephen Enniss is Curator of Literary Collections at the Robert W. Woodruff Library of Emory University. He has recently edited a bibliography of the Irish poet Thomas Kinsella, Peppercanister, 1972-1997: Twenty-Five Years of Poetry, and he currently serves as an advisor to The Irish Book, 1900-2000, forthcoming from Oxford University Press.

Bianca Falbo is an Assistant Professor and Assistant Director of the College Writing Program at Lafayette College.

Werner Gundersheimer is Director of the Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington, D.C., and the author of The Italian Renaissance, Ferrara; The Style of a Renaissance Despotism, and French Humanism, 1470-1600.
Rachel Howarth is Head of the Reading Room at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin. She collaborated on the Epitome and the Selected Index volumes of Bibliography of American Literature, has curated exhibitions based on Ransom Center materials, and is incoming Co-Chair of the RBMS Public Services Discussion Group.

Michael Katchen is a professionally trained visual artist, photographer, and adjunct faculty member at School of Visual Arts in New York. He has continuously worked with the various collections of Franklin Furnace (on a part-time basis) since his student internship there in 1980; his current position is Senior Archivist. Presently he’s planning to make the Franklin Furnace archives available online and is working in concert with a consortium of other arts organizations called CIAO (Conceptual and Intermedia Arts Online) to accomplish that goal.

Richard W. Oram has been Librarian of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at The University of Texas since 1991. He is the author of articles on library history, book collectors, and special collections issues.

Leona Rostenberg and Madeleine Stern are partners in the New York rare book firm of Rostenberg and Stern. They are also co-authors of several books about books, including the forthcoming Books Have Their Faces, as well as the memoir, Old Books, Rare Friends. Individually, they have written numerous scholarly works in their fields.

Joel Silver is Curator of Books at the Lilly Library, Indiana University, and the author of the forthcoming Reference Sources for Rare Books.

Daniel Traister is Curator, Research Services, Annenberg Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Van Pelt-Dietrich Library, University of Pennsylvania. He is also an adjunct professor in the English Department.