CONTRIBUTORS

David Carr is an associate professor at the School of Information and Library Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he teaches courses in resource selection and evaluation, humanities and social sciences information, and cultural institutions. He is currently preparing a collection of essays, titled In Museums.

Joseph L. Sax is a professor of law at the University of California at Berkeley. His most recent book is Playing Darts with a Rembrandt: Public and Private Rights in Cultural Treasures.

Roberta I. Shaffer is Dean of the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Texas at Austin. For the eight years preceding her post at Texas, she was the Director of Research Information Services at the Washington-based, international law firm of Covington & Burling. Shaffer is now serving a three-year term as Vice-President of the International Association of Law Libraries.