CONTRIBUTORS

Francis X. Blouin, Jr. is Director of the Bentley Historical Library, Professor of History, and Professor in the School of Information at the University of Michigan. He has written a number of books and articles that explore the meaning of archives and archival methodologies. Currently he is leading a team to explore the archival capture of e-mail on the campus of the university.

Eli Horowitz is Publisher at McSweeney’s. Over the past eight years, he has edited books and stories by writers including Dave Eggers, William Vollmann, Nick Hornby, Michael Chabon, Joyce Carol Oates, Chris Adrian, Art Spiegelman, and Salvador Plascencia. Horowitz’s design work has been honored by I.D., Print and the American Institute of Graphic Arts.

Katharine Kyes Leab is the Editor-in-Chief of American Book Prices Current and the co-author (along with husband Daniel J. Leab) of The Auction Companion (1981). She has written about books and auctions for trade and scholarly journals as well as for such commercial publications as 7 Days, The Wall Street Journal, Town and Country, the Times Literary Supplement, and The New York Times Book Review. Katharine and Daniel established the RBMS exhibition catalogue awards, known as the Leab awards.

Tod Lippy is Editor of Esopus magazine and President of the Esopus Foundation Ltd. He has lectured extensively on Esopus at many educational and cultural institutions and has been interviewed on the same subject for a number of journals, radio programs, and books.

Beverly P. Lynch is a Professor at UCLA’s Graduate School of Education & Information Studies and the Director of the UCLA Senior Fellows Program and the California Rare Book School. Among many leadership positions, Dr. Lynch has served as Executive Secretary of ACRL and President of ALA and currently serves on the board of Rare Book School. Professor Lynch is the winner of the American Library Association’s 2009 Lippincott award.

Oya Y. Rieger is Associate University Librarian for Information Technologies at Cornell University Library. She oversees the library’s online discovery, digital repository, preservation, electronic publishing, and e-scholarship initiatives and is involved in the coordination of the library’s large-scale digitization collaborations. Her recent publication in 2008 by CLIR focuses on the digitization challenges presented by large-scale digitization projects.